BONES MAY BE THOSE OF IRISH TRANSIENTS

Cholera, killings suspected in deaths of 57 in 1832

BY KATHY MATHESON
Associated Press Writer

MALVERN, PA. • Researchers may have discovered a mass grave for nearly five dozen 19th-century Irish immigrants who died of cholera weeks after traveling to Pennsylvania to build a railroad.

Historians at Immaculata University have known for years about the 57 immigrants who died in August 1832 but could not find the grave. Human bones discovered last week near the suburban Philadelphia university may at last reveal their final resting place — and possibly allow researchers to identify the remains and repatriate them.

The woodsy site where the bones were found is known as Duffy's Cut. It is named after Philip Duffy, who hired the immigrants from Irish counties Donegal, Tyrone and Derry to help build the Philadelphia and Columbia Railroad.

Years of combing the several acres of rough terrain in Duffy's Cut had yielded about 2,000 artifacts, including pipes, buttons and forks. Then, on Friday, researchers using ground-penetrating radar unearthed pieces of two skulls, along with dozens of other bone fragments and teeth. The findings were announced Tuesday.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

William Watson, a history professor at Immaculata University in Pennsylvania, cradled what he believes to be part of a human skull taken from Duffy's Cut, an area of rugged woods near the school. Fifty-seven Irish railroad workers are known to have been buried in the area.

Research led Immaculata University history professor William Watson to conclude that many of the Irish workers died of cholera, an acute intestinal infection caused by contaminated food or water that typically had a mortality rate of 40 percent to 60 percent.

Watson believes some of the workers may have been murdered because of their illness or ethnicity. There was general prejudice against Irish Catholics, tension between residents and the transient workers, and a great fear of cholera — especially among the affluent classes, he said.

Anyone with cholera "was deemed to be almost subhuman," Watson said.

Researchers including University of Pennsylvania geosciences professor Tim Bechtel expect to find bullets buried with the bones.

"Every shovelful of dirt that comes out of there ought to be sifted," Bechtel said.

The immigrants were buried anonymously in a ditch outside what is now Malvern, about 30 miles west of Philadelphia.

Czech government quickly collapses

PRAGUE • The Czech government collapsed Tuesday after losing a parliamentary no-confidence vote over its handling of the economic crisis.

It was a huge embarrassment for Prime Minister Mirek Topolanek, coming just days before a planned visit by President Barack Obama and midway through the Czech Republic's six-month European Union presidency.

The lower house of Parliament voted 101-96 to declare no confidence in the three-party coalition government.
